

Published on Psychology Today (<http://www.psychologytoday.com>)

An Apology from Psychology Today

By PT Editors

Created May 27 2011 - 11:59am

Last week, a blog post about race and appearance by Satoshi Kanazawa was published--and promptly removed--from this site. We deeply apologize for the pain and offense that this post caused. Psychology Today's mission is to inform the public, not to provide a platform for inflammatory and offensive material. Psychology Today does not tolerate racism or prejudice of any sort. The post was not approved by Psychology Today, but we take full responsibility for its publication on our site. We have taken measures to ensure that such an incident does not occur again. Again, we are deeply sorry for the hurt that this post caused.

~Kaja Perina, Editor in Chief

Source URL: <http://www.psychologytoday.com/node/65289>

Links:

- [1] <http://www.psychologytoday.com/experts/pt-editors>
- [2] <http://www.psychologytoday.com/blog/brainstorm>
- [3] <http://www.psychologytoday.com/taxonomy/term/43>
- [4] <http://www.psychologytoday.com/tags/apology>
- [5] <http://www.psychologytoday.com/tags/appearance>
- [6] <http://www.psychologytoday.com/tags/blog>
- [7] <http://www.psychologytoday.com/tags/measures>
- [8] <http://www.psychologytoday.com/tags/nbsp>
- [9] <http://www.psychologytoday.com/tags/offensive-material-0>
- [10] <http://www.psychologytoday.com/tags/prejudice>
- [11] <http://www.psychologytoday.com/tags/psychology-today>
- [12] <http://www.psychologytoday.com/tags/racism>
- [13] <http://www.psychologytoday.com/tags/satoshi-kanazawa>